OUR APPROACH

Murri Sisters Mobile Support Services (MSMSS) works within a culturally respectful framework to provide mobility and outreach support services to Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander women, their children and young people who are experiencing domestic and family violence.

MSMSS works in collaboration with key stake holders and affiliated services that respond to domestic and family violence.

We maintain strong connections with our traditions and strong ties to our traditional homelands.

We provide our clients with a range of information about their rights and how to work with our service to make choices about the supports they receive.

We actively encourage and support our clients to provide feedback and where necessary complaints.

Should a client not be happy with the outcome of their concerns we support their access to an external feedback, complaints and appeals mechanism.

MSMSS is a service of the non-profit organisation, Five Bridges Ltd.

OUR TEAM

Our team works within a cultural respect framework that wrongly believes in a holistic approach enabling us to strengthen, empower, support deadly, safe and healthy lifestyle and well-being.

We believe that kinship plays an important role, it assists in the healing journey and in maintaining strong connections with traditions which are intimately handed down to us by our forefathers and foremothers, for example strong sense of close family ties, respect for Elders, nurturing our young ones, connection to country and culture.

FIVE BRIDGES

Five Bridges is an established not-for-profit organisation, born from a passion to assist local Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities in a hands on, feet to the ground manner that will see our local communities flourish.

The entire Five Bridges team is dedicated to this vision, as best expressed in our purpose statement:

To provide a range of culturally sound activities and initiatives that build capacity, supporting the social norms and behaviors that constitute a positive, proud and responsible Indigenous community.
